EARTH CANVAS

Earth Canvas is about reconnecting people with the farming landscape and using the eye of the artist to express what they see. It is about empowering people to be part of the solution to make planet earth a better place.

JENNY BELL

I have lived the parallels involved in regenerative farming practices and the art making process. These farmers are stepping back from past practices, questioning received information and pressures and creatively reinventing their lives and farms in the process.

My work has revolved around the farm I have lived on for almost 30 years - working in charcoal, oil paint and a range of mixed media.

To work with innovative farmers in a new district amidst a group of artists is a plunge into the unknown. I look forward to the unleashing of the creative energy from these two worlds, and meeting you on Nov 16.

MICHAEL & ANNA COUGHLAN

Nature is complex, it is human nature to try and make it complicated. We are trying to keep it simple whilst dealing with the complexity. Everything being connected - quote by Allan Savory. Michael Coughlan said since we started managing holistically or Regenerative farmer during the 1990's we have changed our decision making and we have a greater degree of control over our business and not putting out fires all the time.

The Coughlan's 2 large Beef cattle grazing businesses Mt Narra Narra a conglomerate of 5 farms in the Holbrook Area and a native grass property at Mourundah south of Narrandera.

BRIAN WEHLBURG

Principal of Inside Outside Management. How we can grow healthy food and build ecosystems to have a positive outcome.

ROD CHISHOLM

CEO from Soils for Life discusses the big picture - thinking about what we need to know about our soil.
